RG104 E-1 Box 175

1156

Phila -
Mar. 19, 1892

Sidney Sherwood

Asks permission to bring Junior Class at Wharton School on visit to Mint.

RECEIVED
MAR 21 1892
U.S. MINT, PHILA.

UNIVERSITY OF PENNSYLVANIA

WHARTON SCHOOL OF FINANCE AND ECONOMY

PHILADELPHIA. March 19, 1892

My dear Sir:

The Junior class at the Wharton School, to whom I am giving a course of lectures on money, have requested me to conduct them on a visit to the Mint on Wednesday next at 10. Also to the charge of our party If you could assign some gentleman connected with the administration of the Mint, who is conversant not merely with the technical processes of coinage and with the coin collection, but also with the coinage laws and the Mint regulations, so that the students could get a glimpse of the subject all around, it would be a great favor to us. It seems to me that our public officers and our institutions of learning draw too much apart. They might be made of much mutual aid to each other. The schools would learn to be more practical, and the public officers would find relaxation and wider views of the theories of government, were such a closer connection made.

RG104 E-1 Box 175

Hoping that you will be willing to make this arrangement, I am

Very Sincerely Yours

Sidney Sherwood

Mr Alvin E. Bolby Sheets
Superintendent of the Mint
Chestnut St. Philadelphia

NARA RG104, Entry 1, Box 175

[Abstract:] Asks permission to bring Junior class at Wharton School on visit to Mint.

University of Pennsylvania
Wharton School of Finance and Economy
Philadelphia
March 19, 1892

My Dear Sir:

The Junior Class at the Wharton School, to whom I am giving a course of lectures on money, have requested me to conduct them on a visit to the Mint on Wednesday next at 10 am. If you could assign to the charge of our parts some gentle man connected with the administration of the Mint, who is conversant not merely with the technical processes of coinage and with the coin collectors, but also with the coinage laws and the Mint regulations, so that the students could get a glimpse of the subject all around, it would be a great favor to us. It seems to me that our public offices and our institutions of learning draw too much apart. They might be made of much mutual aid to each other. The schools would learn to be more practical, and the public officers would find relaxation and wider views of the theories of government, were such a closer connection made.

Hoping that you will be willing to make this arrangement, I am

Very Sincerely Yours
Sidney Sherwood

Mr. Oliver C. Bosbyshell
Superintendent of the Mint
Chestnut St., Philadelphia